Status of Claims

1. Claims 1, 7 and 11-20 are allowable.

Reasons for Allowance

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:
3. The application is regarding anonymous transaction, where the user purchases a random number from an account seller. The random number is subsequently used for online or internet purchases. Specifically, claim 1 describes a method in which "a customer depositing cash with an account seller, the seller being independent of said customer such that the identity of said customer remains anonymous". The account seller communicates the amount being purchased to a central server. The central server transfers the amount from the "from a bank account of the account seller to a central bank having one or more account numbers". The central server also generates stores and issues to the account seller one or more randomly generated number, which is provided to user for purchasing goods/services with a merchant.
4. The closest prior art is by Fite (U.S. 20010042784). Fite teaches a pre-paid card system is provided for paying for purchases over an electronic or computer network, such as the Internet (See abstract). The system includes a plurality of cards each having a unique identity number associated therewith. The cards have different purchasing values. The cards are for one-time use only with no declining balance. A purchase is made by providing the card identification number to a merchant who is registered with the system, whereupon the validity of the card is verified by a host database before the purchase is completed.

5. Fife fails to teach the interaction between the account seller, its bank and a central bank.

Specifically, Fife does not teach the aspect of "central computer server transferring an amount of electronic currency corresponding to the amount that the account seller received from the customer from a bank account of the account seller to a central bank having one or more account numbers". Fife is also silent when it comes to the limitation of "the account seller providing the serial number information to the customer".

Although Fife teaches the aspect of a card being purchased by a user, par. 17, where the card has serial number in it, fig. 2, item 22, Fife does not teach the limitations as claimed in claim 1.

6. Moreover, even if one were to find the missing limitations of "central computer server transferring an amount of electronic currency corresponding to the amount that the account seller received from the customer from a bank account of the account seller to a central bank having one or more account numbers" and "the account seller providing the serial number information to the customer", it would not have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of applicant's invention to combine these limitations with the Fife's invention, especially if those limitations are not within the context of anonymous transactions as claimed. Therefore, for the above reasons, claims 1, 7 and 11-20 are found to be allowable.

Conclusion

7. Any comments considered necessary by Applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
8. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the Examiner should be directed to Evens J. Augustin whose telephone number is (571) 272-6860. The Examiner can normally be reached on Monday-Friday from 10:00 AM-7:00 PM.
